HARDING DOOMED TO"I DID IT"FOR LIFE, SAYS SCRIBE

Claimants of Credit for Swinging Nomination Are Numerous and Their Antecedents Are Varied, Expert Says.

campaign yarns to which a presidential nominee is compelled to listen for must now submit for the rest of his life to inside stories galore of now he was nominated at thicago.

Even to this distance strains, taleshave been wafted telling strains the way the presidential nomination was bestowed on the thick senator. Every body is given credit for having hos the lucky thought some time between midnight and the aurnits hours of June 12, which was the day of which the Republican convention chose its candidates.

Republican convention chose its candidates.

For seven years Weodrow Wilson has been told how he was nominated at the famous Baltimore convention in 1912. And it is recorded to this day in the unwritten archives of the Democratic party that Roger Suilivan turned the trick, that Bryan did it, that Col Harvey did it, that Wilson and the fact is no one man nominated Wilson and no one man nominated Harding. No single boss or leader controlled the Republican national convention at Chicago. A group of men influenced it. Somebody has to do that with an unwieldly body of delegates. But the convention was a contest between two acts of men—Lowden and Wood managers—who tried to manipulate the delegations and there brought on the deadlock which yielded Harding the nomination.

Harvey and Lamont.

Harvey and Lamont.

But to take up seriatim the men who are being credited with having won the nomination for Harding. Col Harvey, editor extraordinary, is given generous praise for his part. It is true the conference was held in his room, but in the same suits was Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan Co. and it is, a fact that neither Col. Harvey nor Mr. Lamont controlled any delegates at Chicago, but were merely interested onlookers, if, indeed, they were able now and then to make a suggestion to their numerous friends who did control delegates.

Mr. Lamont, by the way, is a personal friend of President Wilson, and came back on the steamer George Washington with him from the peace conference at Paris. Mr. Lamont served on the financial section of the American peace mission, and has been in China and Japan helping to rehabilitate the finances of the Far East, so his dropping in at the Chicago convention was merely incidental. And he probably had no desire to influence the Republican convention, even when he did find commodious quarters with Col. Harvey at a sumptuous hostelry.

Power of Big Delegations.

Power of Big Delegations,

Now, Col. Harvey has been a power in Republican councils, but to nominate him Republican: boas is a little exaggerated. The Republican convention at Chicago was bossed or unbossed, according as one regards the half dozen or more leasers who control the big delegations in any convention, be it Republican or Democratic Such a group will always exist so long as Pennsylvania has 16 votes, New York 53, and so on. Numerically, the big delegations are leaders and they centrol numerications when the situation becomes deadlocked.

Credit for the nomination of Harding must repose on these men. Senator Pentose of Pennsylvania and his representative at Chicago. John T. King of Connecticut: Charlen B. Warren, national committeeman from Michigan. Senator Wadsworth of New York: Nicholas Murray Butler and State Senator Tulley of New York: Senator Jim Watson of Indiana, Senator Logic of Massachusetts and former Senator Murray Crane of the same state, and Tobias Hert, of Kentucky.

There are others—some 700 delegates—who played their part affirmatively.

Certainly he might have taken the easy course and ridden the wave of popular favor. He studied the covenant of the league of nations with a desire to support Freeldent Wilson if possible. He found that in good conscience he could not. He adopted the course of any honorable man and followed the dictates of his own conscience. He naturally craved the approval of the people of his state. No man in mubile life, dependent upon the suffrage of the people, desires to gain the lift will of any part of them. But between deserving their approval and having it, he chose to deserve it. Had he voted against his deliberate conviction, and in accordance with what seemed to be the temporary will of the majority he would have been more deserving of censure.

Af the time the selective service law was under consideration the sentiment of Tennessee was against it. If there was any wobbling on the part of the Tennessee delegation it was not on his part. He studied the law and in the face of the opposition of 30 per cent of the telegrams from every direction, supported the measure as the only logical thing to do. Instead of having his car to the ground he had his nose in the lawbooks and he knew he was right. Compare his present status with that of Senator Lamar, just referred to. Shields will live in the history of the state when his detractors are as dead and long forgotten as those who denounced Lamar.

The remonetization of silver was being discussed and there was speculation upon the course of Senator Lamar. The Alississippi legislature assembled in January 1878, and a resolution was adopted demanding the senators from Mississippi to vote for the Itland boil, and also the proposed repeal of the resumption act of 1875. Gam. sling Quah, of Canton, China, who returned to America from his native land to attend the meeting of the general assembly at McKenzie. Tenn. While there Rev. James M. McLeskey, pastor of Central Cumberland church, induced him to come to Memphis to deliver a series of illustrated lectures on his work in China.

Beginning Tuesday he will speak each night this week at 8 o'clock in the Central Cumberland church. Dr. Quah speaks English fluently, baxing come to this country when he was 15 years old, to get rich, he says. Instead of getting rich he got religion, which, he says, is infinitely better than silver and gold.

He was converted at Fort Worth. Tex. In 1890. Experiencing a call to preach, he came to Lebanon, Tenn., the following year to prepare for the ministry. He pursued his studies until 1900, paying his way through school by lecturing on the manners and customs of his people during the summer vacations. On leaving school, he established the Cumberland Presbyterian Chinese mission in Sam Francisco, where he labored until 1908. Then he returned to China to preach to his countrymen, where he was very successful.

So successful was his work that the recent general assembly authorized the organization of a new presbytery in thin and arranged to send a corps of men to assist Dr. Quah in establishing it.

"It was in such a manner that for the first time in the history of this country autocracy came into being. It was an autocracy which was questioned, but which was accepted by virtue of necessity. But this unhappy hour has passed and at San Francisco we again return to true democracy regardless of place holders and pot hunters. We have finished with the fine phrases. This country is determined to act in accordance with its unfailing sense of justice. The indignities of autocracy will never again be accepted by this nation. This is fundamental and no confusion will be brought about by diplomatic or financial machinations."

The little McGill girl testified that she had seen another man standing in the doorway of the home a few minutes after the crime had been committed, holding a flashlight and a revolver, and said he threatened her with death unless she stopped screaming.

McJill and Mrs. Cox sat throughout the hearing, apparently unmoved by the dramatic recital, which brought tears to the eyes of many in the throng of 5,000, which gathered to hear the evidence.

So great was the crowd the court had to adjourn from within the courtroom and conduct its investigation on the lawn in the open, while many clambered to nearby roofs to get a glimpse of the principals in the tragedy.
